

THE UNSHAKEN SELF · CHAPTER 3 WORKSHEET

Karma Yoga Worksheet

Decoupling Actions — The Art of Working Without Keeping Score

Chapter 3 (Karma Yoga — "Do It Because It Matters") teaches that anxiety at work rarely comes from the task itself. It comes from fusing the task to an outcome you cannot fully control. This worksheet is a 3-column practice for decoupling the two: naming a current worry, sorting what is genuinely 100% in your control, and consciously naming what is not — so you can pour full effort where it counts and release the rest.

INSTRUCTIONS

- 1. In column one, name a task or worry from this week in one line (e.g. "What if the client meeting goes badly?").
- 2. In column two, list only what is fully within your power to do — your preparation, your effort, your conduct.
- 3. In column three, name what is genuinely outside your control — other people's reactions, timing, results. Naming it is the act of releasing it.

WEEKLY DECOUPLING TABLE

The Worry / Task	100% In My Control	Outside My Control (Release)

The Worry / Task	100% In My Control	Outside My Control (Release)

TODAY'S DAILY PRACTICE

One Task, For Its Own Sake

Once a day, choose one task and complete it entirely for its own sake — not for a reward, not for recognition, expecting nothing in return. Use it below to notice what shifts.

WEEKLY REFLECTION

1. Where this week did you do good work but still feel anxious about the result?

2. What would change if you measured this week by effort given, not outcomes received?

3. Name one thing you are ready to fully release this week.
